Jewish emojis? Got 'em

TWO of the Jewish emojis already in circulation

RABBIS have called on the world body that regulates emojis to add images that represent Jews.

The Conference of European Rabbis want the emojis to show men in kippot and women in head coverings.

“There are emojis of women in the hijab and Arab clerics, but the Jews have been forgotten,” the rabbis say.

Well, we’re sorry to disappoint them but Jewish emojis already exist. And here are two of them to prove it.
