(October 4, 2019 / JNS) A major Swedish political party has voted to change its official stance in favor of banning circumcision.

The Swedish Center Party tally at its annual meeting was 314-166, overturning the 18-member party board's unanimous rejection of the proposal.

The vote was criticized by party chief Annie Loof.

The party has 31 of the 349 seats in the parliament. It currently backs the left-wing bloc, though it's not officially part of the coalition.

Both the Jewish and Muslim communities expressed outrage over the vote.

"The Swedish Centre Party's decision to promote a ban on religious circumcision is a request for Jews to leave Sweden—the most liberal of E.U. states," said Conference of European Rabbis president Rabbi Goldschmidt in a statement on Thursday. "We mourn the lack of tolerance and loss of diversity in today's Sweden."

"I am very surprised and very disappointed," Aron Verständig, chairperson of the Official Council of Swedish Jewish Communities, told the Expressen newspaper. "This means, if the proposal becomes reality, that it will be completely impossible to live as a Jew or a Muslim in Sweden."

"We are appalled to learn that a political party in Sweden has proposed a ban on non-medical circumcision of infant boys," said the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations in a statement. "This proposal, put forward by members of Sweden's minority Center Party, would be an outrageous violation of religious freedom and civil rights."

The statement continues, saying "the Conference stands with Sweden's Jewish Central Council in condemning this blatantly discriminatory legislation. We call on the government to reject this initiative quickly and absolutely."
