GENEVA, SWITZERLAND (Sputnik) – The Jewish community in the United Kingdom is not afraid of the consequences of Brexit, but that the Labor Party Jeremy Corbyn comes to power, the president of the Council of European Rabbis, Pinchas Goldschmidt, told Sputnik. From November 25 to 27 Geneva hosted a conference of the Council of Rabbis of Europe in which representatives of Jewish communities from about twenty European countries discussed current problems of the Jews.

"Today, British Jews should not fear the consequences of Brexit for the community, like Jeremy Corbyn as a possible prime minister, whose party is completely saturated with anti-Semitism," Goldschmidt said.

The chief rabbi of Moscow said he agreed with his British colleague, Ephraim Mirvis, who in his speech at the forum denounced anti-Semitism in the Labor Party.

According to media, the conservatives of Boris Johnson head the latest polls of British generals scheduled for December 12, followed by Labor, Liberal Democrats, Scottish nationalists, Brexit and Greens party.
